

Building a custom home can be an overwhelming experience, and it was no different for us. It was so important for us to have someone we could rely on to make sure all the details, large and small, were being addressed. Working with Mike was like having a trusted family member on the job site everyday. Whenever we talked, he made us feel as though our home was the only project that mattered. And when the house was finished, Mike was always available to answer our questions or if something needed to be fixed. I can't imagine having anyone other than Mike build a home for us in the Hudson Valley.
